The director of correctional services for Nova Scotia says the Central Nova Scotia Correctional Facility is back to a "lockdown approach" after an assault by inmates that injured four guards.

Sean Kelly said the guards were attacked as inmates were being released from their cells around 10:30 a.m. Saturday, following a week-long lockdown.

"In response to these kinds of incidents, we go back to a lockdown kind of approach where we'll only release so many offenders at any given time," Kelly said Sunday evening, adding that in the wake of the attack, only four inmates are being allowed out of cells at a time.

"We'll likely review that, evaluate that on a daily basis

The jail was under the longest lockdown in its history last week in order to permit exhaustive searches for contraband weapons and drugs.

and, incrementally, we'll allow more and more offenders out until we get to the point where we're resuming normal operations."

Kelly said five cells were opened and eight inmates were released at the time of the attack. The four guards did not require treatment in hospital for their injuries, and the inmates did not use weapons in the attack. He said the jail has a zero-tolerance policy on violence and added the offenders will face disciplinary action as well as any appropriate criminal charges.

"That behaviour's absolutely unacceptable, and that's why we're looking at taking very serious action against the offenders," said Kelly. "So they'll remain locked down until their behaviour improves."

Police search home where deck collapsed, injuring 6

Accident. Most injuries are serious, police say

haley.ryan@metronews.ca

Police say they have searched a residence on Brussels Street in Halifax where a third-storey deck collapsed during a party, sending six to hospital.

Seven people were on the third-storey deck when it gave way around 2 a.m. Saturday, falling onto a lower deck with five people on it.

"There was a social event going on at the time," said Nancy Redback of Halifax Regional Police.

Officers say they searched the property Saturday, and interviewed the owner of the home.

Redback said police are working with HRM building inspectors to determine what caused the accident.

Brendan Elliott, an HRM spokesman, said via email Sunday a review of the file should take place early this week, and Five people were taken by ambulance to the QEII hospital, while another arrived separately a few hours later. Police described the injuries as serious but not life-threatening.

The injured people, four women and two men, are in their early 20s. Police say most were on the bottom deck during the collapse.

Early Saturday morning, the house was blocked off with yellow police tape. The collapsed deck was a pile of twisted and broken wood in the backyard, among a keg and beer cups.

One resident of the house, who declined to be interviewed, could be heard on his phone saying how lucky every-

"I thought it was a firework at first," said Kyle Smith-Windsor, whose backyard connects to the yard where the incident happened.

"Then I saw the whole street light up when the emergency vehicles got there," he said. "I heard people saying, 'Call 911 — is everyone OK?'"

All that was left on the third floor were pieces of what appeared to be rotten wood. The distance between the ground and deck was at least 20 feet.

Anne of Green Gables popularity packs maiden flight from Japan

Direct from Narita to Halifax. Last episode of popular documentary series aired Saturday

BRAEDON CLARK

halifax@metronews.ca

A Japan Airlines Boeing 777 landed in Halifax on Saturday morning, the first time the airline has ever flown here.

The plane, which flew direct from Narita, carried nearly 250 tourists coming for a week-long tour of Atlantic Canada, including stops in Halifax, Cape Breton and Prince Edward Island.

The welcoming party included bagpipes, a Mountie and an actor dressed as Anne of Green Gables, the P.E.I. icon who is incredibly popular in Japan.

A popular documentary series called Hanako to Anne is one factor in why the chartered plane sold out.

The series follows the life of Hanako Muraoka, the first person to translate Anne of Green Gables into Japanese; the program finished airing on Saturday.

"It's been one of the most popular dramas ever aired there," said Robert Ferguson of Tourism P.E.I., who was on hand to welcome the visitors. "It's created an additional demand for people to come here."

Ferguson added that while Japanese tourists account for only a small percentage of the island's visitors, they represent an important market for the province.

"Japanese tourists tend to spend more money than the average tourist, so it's always nice to draw them to P.E.I.," he said.

Hideo Adachi, whose tour company Kintetsu International Express organized the visit, said he is already planning to charter a plane for next year as well.

"We bring between 1,000 and 2,000 people to this area every year at this time," Adachi said.

Adachi added that every seat on the plane sold out despite the lengthy 14-hour direct flight from Japan.

Free school gym program returns to HRM

Coun. Gloria McCluskey says there are many other places the Open Gym program could work. METRO FILE

Two regional councillors say they're thrilled that some school gyms will be available for community use at no charge this winter, and they're hoping to expand the program to include more schools in the future.

The 2014-15 Open Gym program launched Saturday, making six school gymnasiums available for unstructured play to school-aged children and their parents.

"It's a wonderful initiative, and it's a shame that we don't have all our gyms open for stuff like this, but this is a really good start," said Coun. Darren Fisher. "I'm thrilled by it."

A city spokesperson explained that the program is a joint effort between HRM, the Halifax Regional School Board and the provincial Department of Health and Wellness.

Tiffany Chase said the school board and province help cover the cost of the weekend gym use through grants, and HRM provides municipal staff for supervision at each location.

She said the program launched in five schools as Fisher and Coun. Gloria McCluskey, who each have a participating school in their districts, said increasing community access to free or low-cost recreation facilities has been a council priority for some time.

"It would have been nice to have Dartmouth High, where we have the lovely new gym, and there's so many other places," said McCluskey. "We'll have to work on more of it."

Halifax couple's engagement ring saved by NYPD officers

Found. Local women thankful for cops who salvaged the ring

It was supposed to be one of the most exciting moments of Olivia Fader's life; her girlfriend, Mal Zee, had proposed to her on New York's famous Brooklyn Bridge.

The Halifax couple, who have been together for about three years, were vacationing with friends in the Big Apple in August when things turned south.

What should have been a dream quickly turned into a nightmare when Zee dropped the ring and it fell between the bridge's wooden planks, landing on a platform at least 40 feet below.

"We had planned on putting a lock on the bridge, so Mal had the ring attached to her lock," Fader recalled. "When she opened the lock the ring popped off and fell."

Fortunately the couple had stopped at a part of the bridge that had a platform below it, as opposed to just the East River.

"It was the craziest moment of my life, for sure," Fader said. "Mal fell to her hands and knees and was instantly devastated."

A friend who was looking for help for the women came across New York police officers Matthew Manley and William DeFazio, who sprang into action, driving their squad car onto the bridge and climbing down to the platform below.

Manley recovered the ring and flashed a thumbs-up to a relieved Zee, who was understandably distraught over her mistake.

"Mal wasn't convinced we were going to get it back," Fader said.

Fortunately, the couple had come across two very helpful police officers.

"They really went out of their way to help us," Fader said.

Fader and Zee are planning to get married in August 2016, likely in the Annapolis Valley, where Zee is from. No matter what, the two will have an engagement story that's hard to top. BRAEDON CLARK/FOR METRO

Mature student charged after alleged knife threat of teacher

A 44-year-old student at the International Language Institute has been arrested after allegedly threatening a teacher with a knife.

Just before class was set to begin on Friday, and before any other students had arrived, the man is alleged to have approached the teacher and placed a knife on the desk between them.

"Then he said something to the effect of, 'If you don't treat me well today, I might have to use this,'" said Chris Musial, marketing director at the Institute, which focuses on English language instruction.

The teacher was not injured and then ran from the classroom. By the time staff members arrived to investigate, the suspect had fled the building. The school was briefly put on lockdown and the suspect was arrested at his residence at 10:30 a.m.

According to Musial, the suspect had been verbally aggressive to that teacher more than once.

"There were ongoing difficulties that came to a head today," Musial said. "There were incidents that left the teacher in tears."

The frightening incident stood in marked contrast to the quiet hallways of the institute, where students played ping-pong during their downtime just a couple of hours after the lockdown.

"In 31 years, we've never had anything remotely like this happen," Musial said.

Police are investigating a brazen drive-by shooting on a road in North Preston that sent a woman to hospital.

The shooting happened around 6 p.m. Friday on Downey Road.

The woman was shot in Paramedics took the woman to hospital with non-life-threatening injuries.

There have been no arrests and police are asking for anyone with information to contact police.

The Joint Rescue Co-ordination Centre says a fishing vessel began taking on water rapidly Saturday night off the coast of Nova Scotia, but it was eventually escorted to safety.

Officials say a Cormorant helicopter and Hercules aircraft were called to the ship, carrying three crewmen, about 150 kilometres east of Sydney when it began to take on water.

Tests show pulp mill's emissions still too high

Tests conducted last month at the Northern Pulp mill in Nova Scotia show the operation was still spewing emissions above legal limits, the province's Environment Department said Friday.

The tests were completed while the mill was operational Aug. 26 by consulting firm Stantec and submitted to the province within 30 days, as per a government compliance order issued in August.

The legally binding order gives the paper mill in Abercrombie Point near Pictou until May 30 to get its air quality emissions in line or face closure.

Nova Scotia's health minister says a law has been proclaimed that allows the provincial government to sue tobacco manufacturers to help recover health-care costs for illnesses related to tobacco use.

Leo Galvane says the Tobacco Damages and Health-care Costs Recovery Act allows the province to file such a lawsuit, which he says the government plans to do in the Nova Scotia Supreme Court before the end of the year.

Health reorganization: 'My vote, my union, my choice'

Public-sector unions vow fight. Hundreds rally in front of Province House

Leaders of Nova Scotia's public sector unions vowed Friday to fight a bill that would change the collective bargaining process for health-care workers, saying such legislation would be an attack on their labour rights.

Rick Clarke, president of the Nova Scotia Federation of Labour, said the unions were blindsided by the Liberal government after it unilaterally decided to make the changes following a summer of negotiation.

"My mother had brought me up never to call anybody a liar, but I have never been misled by a group of people as severely as we have been by these folks," Clarke said on the steps of the legislature.

He was cheered by about 100 supporters who, at one point during proceedings, broke into a chant of "My vote, my union, my choice."

Joan Jessome, whose Nova Scotia Government and General Employees Union represents most of the health-care workers that would be affected by the legislation, said there was no way the unions would bargain away the rights of their membership.

"NSGEU has 14,000

health-care workers impacted by these decisions," said Jessome. "There is no way in good conscience I could sit down and negotiate away benefits for members and they have no say."

The unions said they want to form a bargaining association to avoid splintering their members in contract negotiations.

But Premier Stephen McNeil said that proposal still leaves far too many bargaining units to deal with, adding the collective bargaining process needs to be streamlined so that the government isn't perpetually negotiating contracts.

"What they brought to us, in my view, was the status quo," McNeil said.

He also said the unions should wait to see the legislation when it is introduced Monday, before arriving at conclusions.

"I'm not sure how they feel they've been misled," he said. "The piece of legislation will reflect what was talked about with them."

Music, laughter great medicines for Arden

A 'Joan Rivers' approach to humour.
Popular Canadian singer-songwriter ending cross-Canada tour in Halifax

JENNA
halifax@metronews.ca

Laughter is said to be the best medicine and when combined with the music of multi-Juno award winner Jann Arden, it's the ultimate antidote.

Taking to the Scotiabank Centre stage Tuesday night for the last stop along her Everything Almost tour, Arden intends to end with a treat befitting her love for her dedicated Halifax audience.

"Well, we're all going to be naked, so that'll be interesting."

With Arden you get what you see — a formula she sticks to as she continues to make waves in the music industry.

Part in parcel comes her legendary sense of humour, a welcomed trademark whether she be on stage or screen.

Proudly taking "the Joan Rivers" approach to humour, Arden believes there is never an inappropriate time to laugh. A part of grieving or dealing with stress, it's a rare form of relief that, for her, juxtaposes nicely with the somewhat harsher tones in her music.

Not for nothing, it hasn't always been the easiest road for Arden. As with any artist, success is truly appreciated only when it's achieved after some hardships.

This layer of emotional struggle continues to make Arden one of the most relatable songwriters working today.

"It was very tough at times, but adversity makes people interesting, adversity makes people worth knowing," she said. "I never want to know anyone that has never been broken; they're not interesting to me or worth spending time with at a party."

Though adversity inspires, diversity has been the name of the game for Arden. She has appeared on a collection of television shows such as Top Chef Canada, Corner Gas, and even did her own stunts on The Mercer Report.

"As far as hosting things

Not like they're paying me millions of dollars to jump off things with Rick Mercer, trust me, but I just enjoy it."

Arden has been moving west to east over the past five weeks, happy to end her tour in Halifax.

"I think it'll be bittersweet," she said.

"It's always amazing going across the country, with Halifax being one of my favourite stops because I have a great history in Halifax and it's such a good place for me to play my music."

Jann Arden is set to perform in Halifax on Tuesday for the first time in several years. CONTRIBUTED

Magnotta murder trial begins

Notorious. 32-year-old has pleaded not guilty in the gruesome slaying of 33-year-old student Jun Lin in 2012

The trial in one of Canada's most publicized and shocking criminal cases is set to begin Monday with evidence being heard in the proceedings against alleged murderer Luka Rocco Magnotta.

Magnotta, 32, has pleaded not guilty to five charges in connection with the slaying and dismemberment of Chinese engineering student Jun Lin in May 2012.

The charges are: First-degree murder; committing an indignity to a body; publishing obscene material; criminally harassing Prime Minister Stephen Harper and other members of Parliament; and mailing obscene and indecent material.

Trial judge Guy Cournoyer questioned potential jurors earlier this month about whether they could stomach evidence that could be considered gruesome, graphic and possibly upsetting.

Fourteen bilingual jurors will hear the case. They will receive instructions from Cournoyer before prosecutor Louis Bouthillier begins presenting the Crown's arguments.

The investigation was launched after the discovery of a human torso stuffed in trash behind a Montreal apartment building in May 2012. Body parts then began surfacing in different regions of Canada — first at a federal political office in Ottawa and, later, at two British Col-

A video that purportedly depicted a slaying was posted online around the same time and was linked by Montreal police to the discovery of the body parts.

Bouthillier has said up to 60 Crown witnesses could be heard at the trial, which is expected to last between six and eight weeks. Some Europeans could be called to testify.

The trial is likely to lure plenty of curious onlookers. During the preliminary hearing, the case attracted criminology students, legal junkies and even a handful of people who appeared to support Magnotta.

Diran Lin has attended several days of proceedings and has said he hopes to see justice for his son.

Jun Lin, 33, had been living in Canada only since 2011, realizing a long-standing dream by coming to Montreal. ## Ford: 'Bigger and badder' cancer no match for me

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford is embraced by his brother Doug, daughter Stephanie and son Doug at Ford Fest in Toronto on Saturday. CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

A defiant Toronto Mayor Rob Ford returned to the public spotlight Saturday, talking tough about his cancer by saying he'd take it "out the back" and get rid of it like he did his substance abuse problems.

Ford mounted a stage at his family's annual barbecue party and told a crowd of hundreds that he was going to triumph over his latest struggle just as he tackled substance abuse during a stint in rehab that ended three months back.

"I had a guy I was looking in the mirror every morning and saying, 'You know what? I can't beat this guy.' Wherever I went, that guy was there, and he was beating me every time. So you know what? I took that guy out the back, and I took care of him," Ford said, his voice sounding hoarse at times.

"A couple weeks ago, the doctor came up to me ... He says, 'We got someone bigger and badder than that,' and I said, 'Who's that guy?' And he said, 'Cancer,'" Ford said.

"I said, 'You know what? Go tell cancer that I'm going to put him where I put that guy in the mirror three months ago.'"

Saturday's party came exactly one month before the election, and though the crowd's spirits were high, the ailing mayor's health loomed large.

Supporter Leo Robinson said that even if Ford was battling cancer, he shouldn't quit politics but rather keep at it and stand up for the little guys.

"He's for the people. And once you're for the people, at the end of the day, whether you're here or not, you're still going to be fighting for the people," Robinson said.

Ford gave heartfelt thanks to his supporters, known in Toronto as "Ford Nation."

"Every single person has had personal problems in life," he said. "You find out who your real friends are and Ford Nation has never wavered one iota."

Volcano in Japan kills more than 30

Mount Ontake.

First fatal disaster in modern times at popular climbing spot

Reaching the ash-covered summit of a still-erupting volcano in central Japan, rescue workers made a grim discovery Sunday: 31 apparently dead people, some buried in knee-deep ash.

Four victims were brought down and confirmed dead, one day after Mount Ontake's big initial eruption, said Takehiko Furukoshi, a Nagano prefecture crisis-management official. The 27 others were listed as having heart and lung failure, the customary way for Japanese authorities to describe a body until police doctors can examine it.

Officials provided no details on how they may have died.

It was the first fatal eruption in modern times at 3,067-metre Mount Ontake, a popular climbing destination about 210 kilometres west of Tokyo on the main Japanese island of Honshu. A similar eruption occurred in 1979, but no one died.

Rescue helicopters hovered over ash-covered mountain lodges and vast landscapes that looked a ghostly grey, like the surface of the moon, devoid of nearly all colour but the bright orange of rescue workers' jumpsuits.

Japanese media reported that some of the bodies were found in a lodge near the summit and that others were buried in ash up to 50 centimetres deep. Police said only two of the four confirmed dead had been identified.

Hong Kong. Police use tear gas to disperse pro-democracy protesters

Hong Kong police blasted pro-democracy protesters with tear gas and used vans with flashing lights Sunday night, in renewed efforts overnight to force demonstrators from streets near the government headquarters.

Monday, the city's top leader urged protesters to go home.

Hong Kong's top leader, Chief Executive Leung Chun-ying, reassured the public that rumours the Chinese army might intervene were untrue.

"I hope the public will keep calm. Don't be misled by the rumours. Police will strive to maintain social order, including ensuring smooth traffic and ensuring the public safety," said the Beijing-backed Leung, who is deeply unpopular. He added, "When they carry out their duties, they will use their maximum discretion."

As sit-ins spread to other areas of Hong Kong in the strongest challenge yet to Beijing's decision to limit democratic reforms for the semi-autonomous city, Leung urged everyone to go home and avoid causing trouble.

"We don't want Hong Kong to be messy," Leung said as he read a statement aloud early Monday on TV.

After spending hours holding protesters at bay, police lobbed canisters of tear gas into the crowd on Sunday evening. The searing fumes sent demonstrators fleeing, though many came right back to continue their protest. The government said 26 people were taken to hospitals; some carried away on stretchers. ## Air France. Pilots' union ends 14-day strike action

Air France's leading pilots' union on Sunday announced an end to a 14-day strike that grounded roughly half of the airline's flights, stranded passengers worldwide and led to stern shows of frustration by the French prime minister.

After a late-night, 15-hour negotiating session with management, leaders of the SNPL pilot union walked away with no accord, but with the realization that the strike "is not an end in itself," said union spokesman Antoine Amar. The union was "taking up its responsibilities" and ending the walkout so that service can now resume and negotiations can continue peaceably, he said.

Air France, in a statement, said that service would start returning to normal on Tuesday — meaning that flights already cancelled between now and then won't be reinstated.

At the centre of the stand-off are Air France's ambitions to develop a low-cost affiliate, Transavia. The pilots' union started the strike out of concern that management was looking for a way to outsource jobs to countries with lower taxes and labour costs.

September is often the best month for weather but the worst historically on the stock market. Not this year. Still, the thumbs had a lot to choose from in the September business and investing roundup.

Thumbs down:

Tim Hortons married Wendy's in 1995. That alliance was entirely one-sided with Tim's proping up a failing fast-food business. Now there's a second marriage to Burger King. But wait — the matchmaker behind the union is actually 3G Capital of Brazil, which owns the home of the Whopper.

The 3G merger machine loves buying winners then getting out the corporate scissors to cut, cut, cut to boost profits. 3G Capital, by the way, was responsible for the closure of the Heinz factory in Leamington, Ont.

The 3G knives have already been slashing at Burger King's operations, axing huge numbers of head-office jobs and dumping company-owned stores. Soon, that bit of fresh lettuce and tomato on your Tim's breakfast sandwich may be history.

Thumbs down:

Could American Apparel make things any worse for its brand image? Oh yes, it could.

The hip clothing retailer fired its foot-in-mouth founder, Dov Charney, in June over alleged sexual harassment. Then, just to prove that the company does not condone the objectification of women or girls, it launched a back-to-school campaign with Lolita.

Come again? There's nothing like a photo of a mini-skirted, supposed school-girl bending over showing her undies and bottom cheeks to demonstrate that the company is serious about treating us gals in a respectful way.

The ad was promptly banned in British publications.

Detroit. Emergency manager drawing closer to unemployment

Kevyn Orr's success in shepherding Detroit through its historic bankruptcy will leave him unemployed, at least temporarily, when and if his task in the Motor City is complete.

The turnaround expert who helped Chrysler through its 2009 Chapter 11 restructuring says he has given no thought to what he will do once Detroit's bankruptcy trial ends.

"I will talk to no one about a potential job until I'm done here," Orr said minutes after signing an order Thursday relinquishing most of the power he's had for the past year and a half as the state-appointed emergency manager back to the mayor and city council. "I'll be truly unemployed — hopefully in a couple of weeks."

China announced Sunday the lifting of restrictions on foreign investment for several industries, from green tea to civil airplane engines, in a special free-trade zone in the business hub of Shanghai.

WILL DOCTORS' ORG GET LOUSY TREATMENT, TOO?

On Thursday, in the warm afterglow of a Throne speech that zeroed in on “unsustainable (public-sector) wage increases” and promised a “hiring slowdown and steps to achieve a more sustainable wage pattern,” Health Minister Leo Glavine was clear as glass.

Premier Stephen McNeil's government had had it up to here with recalcitrant health-care unions. The unions had come up with a proposal for a collective bargaining process for the newly merged, streamlined, one-size-fits-all provincial health authority, and the government had flatly rejected it. The time for talk was past before it began.

“We will identify who will represent nurses, who will represent technologists, clerical and administration,” Glavine told reporters precisely.

Legislation would be introduced during Monday night's legislature session.

Stephen Kimber
halifax@metronews.ca

Less than 24 hours later—in the aftermath of the first cold bath of what promised to be many protests at Province House—Glavine was back at the microphone.

He had, he now said, misspoke himself. What he meant to say, he said instead, was that he would introduce legislation to reduce the number of contracts from 50 down to four. The legislation would lay out a process to get to that point, leaving it up to a mediator to determine which unions get to represent which workers for which contracts.

Un-obfuscated... the workers may still not get to choose which union will represent them, but the government is now doing its PR best not to be the one to say so.

The government's goal hasn't really changed. Despite McNeil's assurance he is “not at all going to war with organized labour,” he wants to decelerate the Nova Scotia Government Employees' Union and undermine its president, Joan Jessome. What better way than to shuffle the 3,500 metro nurses and licensed practical nurses currently represented by the NSGEU—more than 10 per cent of its membership—off to the Nova Scotia Nurses' Union?

Watch for it.

We'll also see soon enough if the government's eagerness to confront in the name of fiscal responsibility extends to the group that accounts for the single largest health care cost—the $800 million a year we spend on doctors' services. The province's contract with Doctors Nova Scotia expires in March 2015.

Hold your breath.

Serbia holds first pride march in four years

Waving rainbow-coloured flags, several hundred gay activists proceeded undisturbed through downtown Belgrade on Sunday thanks to the protection of thousands of riot police.

Skirmishes were reported between small groups of extremists and police during and after the march, with soccer hooligans attacking liberal B-92 radio and TV station with flares and smoke bombs. Two policemen were injured, the station said. Also, the hooligans set one public bus on fire with flares, according to police.

Belgrade Mayor Sinisa Mali

joined the march together with several foreign diplomats and party leaders.

Officials allowed Sunday's event, despite fears of a repeat of the violence in 2010 when right-wing groups attacked a pride march in Belgrade, triggering clashes with police that left more than 100 people injured. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Symbolic

The march advanced for several hundred metres through empty streets where shops were closed and public transport was stopped. Still, it was important symbolically as a rare public event.

Former child soldier, actor to release album

The Good Lie star Emmanuel Jal is set to launch his fifth studio album The Key on Oct. 9th at Toronto's Tattoo Queen West.

Jal will be world premiering songs from his new 13-track album — which includes collaborations with Nelly Furtado.

Recorded in Kenya, Uganda, London, New York, Connecticut and Toronto, The Key seamlessly blends traditional African music with contemporary urban, hip hop and global pop music rhythms, while incorporating EDM, reggae/dub, soul and Afro beat elements.

Two songs from The Key (Scars and We Fall) are featured on The Good Lie soundtrack, a film that Jal co-stars in alongside Reese Witherspoon, and that premiered at TIFF (Toronto International Film Fest) in early September.

Jal has collaborated with and performed alongside numerous big acts including Peter Gabriel, Alicia Keys and Joss Stone, and had the honour of performing at the late Nelson Mandela's 90th birthday celebration in London. He has been featured on CNN, Time, USA Today, MTV, BBC, New York Times, Rolling Stone, NPR, Huffington Post, CBC (Strombo's The Hour, Q with Jian Ghomeshi), CTV's Canada AM and most recently appeared on the season premiere of The Queen Latifah Show on Sept. 15, where he got the Queen herself to dance to his buzzy Afro beat song Dusu, which appears on The Key.

Story of lost boys of Sudan a wrenching tale of humanity

The Good Lie. Actors have a special tie to true tale of child soldiers who escaped to settle in Kansas City — it was their own

scene@metronews.ca

A seemingly endless line of children trails across the horizon. Orphaned by civil war, they're walking — they hope — to safety. But they have hundreds of miles to go, and no guarantees of what they'll find along the way.

It's a scene from new movie The Good Lie, but it's far from fiction.

"I feel like it's my story being told on the big screen," said actor Emmanuel Jal.

"Emmanuel and I carried AK-47s just to live, before we even knew how to read and write," said actor Ger Duany.

Jal was born into the life of a child soldier; Duany was forcefully recruited. Eventually, they both joined the thousands of orphans who fled the brutal civil war that broke out in Sudan in 1983. Walking for months in search of sanctuary, those children became known as the "lost boys."

Those who survived the journey ended up in refugee camps in neighbouring Kenya and Ethiopia. About 3,600 of them were eventually relocated to the United States.

Jal and Duany, along with fellow Sudanese actors Arnold Oceng and Kuoth Wiel, bring the story of the lost boys (and girls) to life in The Good Lie. The movie traces the journey of four young Sudanese refugees as they flee the war, living first in a refugee camp and then ending up in truly unfamiliar territory: Kansas City, Mo.

Although life in the refugee camps was an improvement over life on the run, it still wasn't easy. "There was no electricity, no running water," said Duany. And the lucky few who made it to America faced a new set of challenges.

"Everything was new when we came here," said Duany.

Everything — from drinking straws, to light switches to toilets — was a mystery. The moments of discovery provide a bit of lighthearted relief in the movie, as the refugees gradually find their feet with the help of a no-nonsense employment counsellor played by Reese Witherspoon. Although Jer and Duany believe the story of the lost boys is an important one to tell, revisiting the past wasn't easy. Duany had hoped for years to act in a film depicting the struggles of Sudan's lost boys, but when the chance finally came, "I read the script and I collapsed. I threw it away, and I went to the bathroom to cry," he said. "I never thought this story would be told."

But it's worth it, he says.

"This was horrible, it happened a long time ago, but we want to tell this story now," he said. "Because there is another story coming."

Jal agrees. "This film is not just about the lost boys," he said. "This is about humanity."

As well as raising awareness about the plight of Sudanese refugees, the actors hope the film will help raise funds to support the humanitarian and educational needs of the lost boys. Find out more about the Good Lie Fund at thegoodlifefund.org.

The Good Lie opens in Toronto on Oct. 3, and across Canada on Oct. 24.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Pop goes the week

Lawrence finds Coldplay gigs are better than counting sheep

STARGAZING
Malene Arpe
scene@metronews.ca

Jennifer Lawrence keeps turning up at boyfriend Chris Martin's Coldplay concerts. Lesson learned: If you find a cure for insomnia that works, you just stick to it.

James Blunt got married this past week. What- ever. Sure. OK.

This week in celebrity activism: 1. Emma Watson delivers a passionate speech on gender equality at the UN. 2. Leonardo DiCaprio, Mark Ruffalo, Sting, Edward Norton and Evangeline Lilly participate in climate change marches. 3. Joseph Gordon-Levitt launches a project, inviting people to tell him what feminism means to them. 4. Matt Damon speaks at the Clinton Initiative. 5. Kim Kardashian posts a picture of Kanye West ("MyFineAssHusband") and campaigns for a guest spot on Downton Abbey.

Jeremy Renner reveals he got married. Too bad. He's kinda hot.

Eleven months after their split, Kris Jenner and Bruce Jenner are getting divorced. They've already split everything right down the middle: Kris gets the money and the houses and Bruce gets away.

Tom Hardy secretly married Charlotte Riley more than two months ago. Noooooo00000000.

With Clooney gone, is next top bachelor Leo or Pauley?

George Clooney went and got himself hitched this weekend. So that means one thing: We need to hurry up and find Hollywood's Next Most Eligible Bachelor.

It's a tough act to follow, to be sure, but someone out there has to be at least nearly as adept at being rakish and charming, looking great in a tux and squiring a stream of enviable girlfriends while avoiding marriage.

So, ladies, who is the new reigning king of single Hollywood? The smart money is on the ever-debonair Comedy Store heir Pauley Shore, who oozes confidence and sophistication. (Although Shore has some serious competition in A-list gala circuit fixture David Spade.) But our money is on Ryan Seacrest. Is that guy ever going to meet the right girl and settle down?

The real answer is noted environmentalist, serious actor type and serial model defiler Leonardo DiCaprio — which is a bit awkward, since Clooney isn't such a fan of the Great Gatsby star.

One Direction terrorist joke goes south for Daily Show

The folks at The Daily Show with Jon Stewart have learned not to kick the hornet's nest that is One Direction fandom. Fans lit up Twitter with the hashtag #thedaily-showgonetoo far after Jessica Williams mentioned the group in a joke.

"Just as you were talking, a new terrorist group formed with one member each from ISIS, al-Nusra, al-Qaeda, Hamas, One Direction, and the Zetas drug cartel," she reported during the show.

Fans immediately assumed the show's writers were poking fun at Muslim group member Zayn Malik.

Some of the more choice responses included: "Don't try joking with our boys, because we are Directioners and we are mafia," "I suggest you take 8,381 steps back before I actually kill you" and "It's not funny to make jokes about terrorism in the first place."

It's been a while since Charlie Sheen has gone off the deep end, but he seems to be making sure he'll have no one to help him out the next time he does.

Pick a destination to keep your financial plan on track

Where are you going? Your financial planning journey starts with a goal

GAIL VAZ-OXLAIDE
Gail blogs daily at gailvazoxlaide.com

Imagine that your best friend has invited you to stay at her cottage. She tells you it's "up north." That's it, no more info. That's how most people treat the management of their money. The destination is vague and they have no idea which way to go. I want you to think of a financial plan as a GPS device for your financial life. But before you can head off, you at least need to know where you want to end up!

While you have to know where you're headed to lay down a trip plan, if you change your mind, or if something throws you off track, you don't just stop or wander around aimlessly. Just as with a GPS, you recalculate your route. You figure out what you want to do next and head off.

To have the life you want, you need to know where you're going. This isn't about casting your life plan in concrete. It's about having a sense of your destination and some good directions. You need to put an address in your GPS before you can get started. That address is your goal.

You can have loads of dreams and just as many goals, but you can't possibly do them all at once. Time to prioritize.

Figuring out your financial goals before you set out will keep you headed in the right direction. ISTOCK

When you make your goals, identify what the most important thing on your list is. Label it No. 1. That's the thing you'll put the majority of your effort towards.

You can work towards more than one goal at a time, but you need to prioritize. No, you can't buy a house, have a baby and go back to school all at the same time. What's your Goal No. 1? Where do the others fit into your plans? Label whatever else you're working on as No. 2, No. 3, and so on.

Those goals have to be very specific. Be clear about what you want. Want to buy a home? What kind of house? Semi, condo, or fully detached? In the city? In the country? For how much? For $175K, $350K, $1.2 million?

Since, as I have been heard to say about a bazillion times, "a goal without a deadline is a dream," you have to add some dates.

Do you want to buy that home in two, three or five years? Again, the timeline isn't cast in concrete, but having it means you're serious about your focus.

Some goals have a short-term timeline, like saving for your sister's wedding. Some goals are medium-term, like putting together the down payment on a home. Some are long-term, like saving for retirement.

Patience and tenacity will get you where you want to go. Baby steps or great big leaps, you'll move at a different pace on different goals depending on what else is going on in your life. What's important is to keep moving forward.

If you've got kids who are babies, don't ignore the educational savings plan. Putting just a little away each month puts momentum on your side. It doesn't have to be a ton to start. But you have to start. It's the same with balancing debt repayment and savings. You can't just focus on your arrival time when you're heading to your destination, you have to watch road conditions and monitor your speed.

You want to get your student debt paid off. Great. You've got $31,000 worth of debt, and you want it gone in

Chart your milestones

Your financial plan tells you how far you have to go. It reassures you that you're making progress.

- When it comes to a goal, you have to find a way to visualize the progress you're making.
- Whether you create a chart with the milestones to your goal highlighted, or you create a vision board on which you can plot each step you've taken, track your progress.
- That'll help you moving towards your destination.

24 months. Really? The principal alone will cost you $1,292 a month from your cash flow? Is that realistic? There's no point in setting goals you can't achieve. It's better to be realistic about your destination and when you plan to get there.

Don't expect things to go smoothly the whole way. C'mon, you know life isn't like that! You've got to be prepared to adjust your plan.

Halfway to your destination, a roadblock can send you miles off course. Don't give up. Show some backbone. Recalculate your journey and get moving. If you're determined, you'll get there. There may be some bumps and jolts along the way, but you'll get there.

My seat-mate cycles, then sits, then stinks

Dear Metro,

There's a guy at my office who bikes to work in the morning then stinks all day. Our colleagues talk about his smell behind his back, which seems mean — other than the body odour, he's a great person. What's the best way to let him in on the issue without embarrassing him?

— No Mo' B.O.

OFFICE SPACE
Eleni Deacon
life@metronews.ca

Dear NMBO,

Firstly, kudos for staying out of the gossip. Let your associates nurse their precious olfactory glands without you. While it can be unpleasant, B.O. doesn't have to be a big deal.

That said, your colleague smells and he deserves to know the truth, especially if it's affecting his reputation around the office. Under the appropriate circumstances, a private, one-on-one conversation is probably your best approach. If you're close with this co-worker—for example, if he's one of your top office buds—bring it up in a relaxed way next time you're grabbing coffee or lunch together. "Hey, you might want to double up on that deodorant after your morning commute," you could say, adding that a hefty bike ride will have even the daintiest of clean freaks smelling ripe.

In cases where face-to-face is too awkward—or just too plain smelly—you could also address it with a frank but polite email.

This spares him the discomfort of having to face you when he realizes it's him, not that science project in the back of the fridge, that's stinking up the office kitchen. Whatever words you choose, keep your note kind and casual. And you don't need to tell him his pits are the talk of the water cooler.

If you're not comfortable with a direct B.O.-vention, there are likely people at your workplace who are trained to have these types of conversations. Your HR department or managerial staff can address the issue from an administrative perspective, getting to the point without making it personal.

Keep in mind that body odour is caused by many factors, several of them health-related. If there's any chance your colleague's issues go beyond poor post-bike hygiene, leave the discussion to those responsible for sensitive workplace affairs. Otherwise, you might find yourself the subject of an HR complaint of your own.

And if all else fails, crack a window or subtly spritz some Febreze around.

Lessons from the desert

When things go awry, one must make do on the fly

The severe market crash in October 2008 changed my life. I started running to regain my health, both emotional and physical. Shortly after I took my first steps, I ran the Gobi March in China in June '09, followed by the Atacama Crossing in Chile in '10 and the Sahara Race in Egypt in '11. In this post, I share a lesson learned from my experience running deserts.

LESSONS FROM THE DESERT
life@metronews.ca

Competing in the Chilean Atacama Crossing, my first team-based extreme ultramarathon, I learned the benefit of rapidly switching strategies.

In that event, each member of our team of three was required to run 250 kilometres, remaining within 10 metres of one another at all times

Going to war when your team isn't winning wastes time and energy. Focus that fervour on perfecting a new plan of action. ISTOCK

Twenty minutes into the race, we realized our team wasn't evenly matched—which meant we risked losing everything. We had an impromptu meeting while running to clear the air of each member's emotions: fury, resentment, and embarrassment. After a colourful exchange, the conversation shifted to strategy. Now last in the team category, we agreed our fastest would lead us out, while our strongest would dedicate their race to the weak member. Basically, for every uphill or section where we struggled, our weakest member was either pulled by the hand or pushed on their back.

Four hours later on that long first-day stage, the lead team was in sight, initiating a long uphill climb.

Never expecting to see them, we were gifted with a surge of adrenaline. With three kilometres to go, pushing our weak teammate uphill, we passed them, narrowly winning by two minutes. We kept the strategy going for five more marathons and crossed the finish line hours ahead of the second-place team.

In team-based competitions or projects, when a team member can neither fulfil their role nor be replaced, everyone has to improvise in real time and willingly commit to a new role to benefit the team.

In the heat of the moment when I realized we hadn't all prepared equally, I remember being furious.

Yet, when we crossed the finish line hours later, I felt only gratitude for having played my role in a great team victory.

Saint Mary's suffers humiliating loss on home turf

Things have gone from bad to worse for the Saint Mary's Huskies football team.

Quarterback Ben Rossong threw six interceptions, three of which were returned for touchdowns, as the Concorida Stingers humiliated Saint Mary's 63-7 in interlock CIS football action Saturday afternoon at Huskies Stadium.

Rossong had a dismal performance at pivot. Besides the six picks, he completed just three of 18 passes for a mere 18 yards.

All tolled, Saint Mary's accumulated only 62 yards in total offence, including 45 yards on the ground.

Saturday's game was basically over after the first quarter when Concordia, ranked ninth in the country, scored 35 unanswered points.

Saint Mary's is now 0-4 and has been outscored 149-35.

Things don't get any easier for the Huskies as they now gear up for a home-and-home series with the unbeaten Mount Allison Mounties.

Europe dominant in latest Ryder Cup victory

The tone was set by Rory McIlroy, the best player in the world. The winning shot came from Jamie Donaldson, a Ryder Cup rookie.

Europe added another layer to its Ryder Cup dominance on Sunday by leaving no doubt who had the best team, if not the best players. Behind two early comebacks that showed its resolve, Europe clinched the cup with four matches still on the course.

With a 16-1/2 to 11-1/2 victory, Europe kept that gold trophy for the eighth time in the last 10 tries.

Donaldson finished off the Americans with a 9-iron that settled 18 inches from the cup on the 15th hole against Keegan Bradley to set off the celebration. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Close to 7,300 fans watched 20-year-old Halifax Mooseheads forward Philippe Gadoury step back onto Scotiabank Centre ice on fire, after a neck injury sent him back from Montreal Canadiens training camp early, to contribute two goals and two assists en route to a 6-4 win over the Chicoutimi Saguenéens Friday night.

"I felt pretty good," the Greenfield Park, Que., native said after the game. "It's always fun to be back in the lineup, and having a good game makes it a plus."

The Oakland Athletics waited until the last day of the regular season to finally clinch their third consecutive playoff berth.

Adam Dunn's wait to make the post-season for the first time lasted much longer: 2,001 games over 14 seasons.

"It's what you work for your whole career," said Dunn, who was traded to Oakland from the Chicago White Sox on Aug. 31. "I don't know how fair it is that I get to enjoy kind of the fruit of their labour, but beggars can't be choosers."

Sonny Gray threw a six-hitter to win for the first time in five September starts, Josh Reddick had an RBI triple and Oakland beat the Texas Rangers 4-0 Sunday to clinch the American League's second wild card.

The A's play the win-or-go-home wild-card game Tuesday night at Kansas City, which won five of the seven games in the season series against Oakland (88-74).

Jays hang up hats on disappointing 2014

October out of reach.

Toronto reflects on the season that was and looks forward to 2015

Frustrating. Entertaining. Disappointing.

The Toronto Blue Jays wrapped up yet another roller-coaster season Sunday rife with emotion.

"We were an entertaining team," manager John Gibbons said before the season-ending 1-0 loss to Baltimore. "A frustrating team but very entertaining. I think we gave our fans some pretty good entertainment along the way. But in saying that too we're all disappointed."

Toronto finished the season with an 83-79 record, falling into third in the American League East on the last day as the Yankees (84-78) moved ahead with a win. The Jays finished 13 games behind the Orioles.

The Jays were 38-24, six games atop the division, on June 6 — fuelled in large part by a 21-9 May (a .700 record for the month).

If May was the peak, August was the valley. The team slumped to a 9-17 record (.346) with Adam Lind, Edwin Encarnacion and Brett Lawrie missing chunks of action with injuries.

Pitcher R.A. Dickey talked of the need for consistency.

General manager Alex An-

"We didn't achieve our goals. That goes without saying," he said.

"It's more disheartening this season, I felt like we were close. Obviously we were there the bulk of the year," he added.

Anthopoulos repeated his confidence in Gibbons, who has a rolling contract that kicks in every Jan. 1.

Nationals. Diving catch saves no-hitter for Zimmermann

Jordan Zimmermann pitched the first no-hitter for the Washington Nationals, the gem preserved when defensive replacement Steven Souza Jr. made a diving catch in left field for the final out in a 1-0 victory over the Miami Marlins in a regular-season finale Sunday.

Zimmermann (14-5) allowed only two baserunners, finishing with 10 strikeouts and one walk in the fifth no-hitter in the majors this year.

Christian Yelich almost wrecked Zimmermann's bid with two outs in the ninth inning. He sent a long drive to left-centre, and Zimmermann leaned his head back and winced, thinking his no-hitter was lost.

But Souza, who made his big-league debut this year and took over for Ryan Zimmermann to begin the ninth, ran hard into the gap, extended his glove and leaped for the sensational catch. Souza used his bare hand to squeeze the ball in his mitt as he fell.

Souza hopped up and punched the air. Zimmermann, watching from the mound, raised both arms overhead and pumped his right fist.

"I thought that was a double for sure, and here he comes out of nowhere and makes the play," Zimmermann said.

It was the fifth time there has been a no-hitter on the final day of the season.

It's a beautiful day in Mr. Rodgers' neighbourhood. Green Bay QB follows up subpar performance with high-scoring win Aaron Rodgers urged Packers fans to relax. Maybe they will after this one.

Rodgers threw for 302 yards and four touchdowns, and Green Bay shook off one of its worst offensive performances in years with a 38-17 victory over the Chicago

Bears on Sunday afternoon.

The Packers (2-2) scored on their first six possessions and racked up 358 yards after being held to 223, their lowest total since 2008, a week earlier in a 19-7 loss at Detroit.

They intercepted Jay Cutler twice in the third quarter to pull away from the Bears (2-2). That gave Green Bay five straight wins at Soldier Field, including the NFC title game four years ago and a playoffs-or-bust finale for both teams last season.

Rodgers called on Packers fans to take a deep breath during the week, and he gave them reason to exhale with this performance.

"I just wanted to remind everybody that it's a long season, and at some point, we're going to get this thing figured out," Rodgers said.

He had all the answers in this one.

Rodgers posted a 151.2 rating for the game, completing 22 of 28 passes, and had all the time he needed with five-time Pro Bowl defensive end Jared Allen sitting out because of an illness.

He threw two touchdown passes each to Randall Cobb and Jordy Nelson, and a fifth got called back by a penalty.
